Planner's comments:

This was my first attempt at planning. I learnt a lot and thoroughly enjoyed the experience. Thanks to those (including my family) who assisted me on the day, not just practically but also with advice. I also valued the comments made on the courses I had set (mostly good, with a few bits of constructive criticism that I'll take into account next time). I was particularly pleased that my attempts to create a number of route choice options were generally successful. Thanks also to Chris Burden who cast his extraordinarily experienced eye over my preparatory paperwork and enlightened me about a range of planning strategies, the subtleties of Purple Pen and thinking clever about sharing controls between different courses. I can recommend the experience to others, especially as, as Jack Cooper assured me, having a go contributes to becoming a better orienteer.
