Mud, glorious mud. The fact that so many turned out even though it poured that morning (albeit it was largely rain-free whilst folk were running) reminded me of the Ovenden fell race some years back. Forecast for a severe gale the numbers on the day swelled from the usual 80 or so to perhaps double that; was it the prospect of running in a storm that actually attracted them.? The Old Bill were present, having fished a lad and his dog out of Ogden Water – they'd been blown into the water by a gust. They banned us from running along the reservoir embankment but seemed, thankfully, to care little about our welfare on the tops. It was great to see a couple of fell runners from my running club have a go at Yellow and Orange thereafter. Patrick did fine on Green also. I hope and think we'll see them again given their experience meant they can reasonably claim to have moved on from 'headless chickens' (as so many fell runners readily acknowledge they are). Is this a community orienteering should have its eye on in efforts to widen participation? Thanks to my boys, Macsen and Douglas, for helping out.

In sport, Graeme Tiffany.
