- I hope you enjoyed the event, and spotted the controls that were near to each other albeit on either side of the map (this seemed to create a cognitive challenge too far for some). My aim was to get folk 'flipping their maps'.
- There were half a dozen that turned up for the training beforehand; I hope it was useful.
- Corrections please to graeme.tiffany@gmail.com
- Note on scoring for 45 min. competitors: Score = score ÷ divided by 45 and x by 60.
- Thanks to Julie for bringing the kit to mine when my car was knackered. Thanks also to Leon and Chris for control collecting – this really does make the organiser's job easier. With more volunteers everyone can get off quicker – so please help by just collecting a few if you can.
- Congratulations to those clearing the controls; I did figure it was possible, with a super human effort. Shout out for Rob King 😊 and Richard Foster for getting as close to the wire as imaginable.
- Tip for future organisers: take a headtorch with you when setting out the controls (or work out precisely what time it gets dark); it's really not a good idea relying on the light from your phone.
- Lost property: a pair of gloves.
