

AIRE night score Bramley 25th January 2023

Thanks everyone who came, I hope you had a good outing. Fortunately the weather was kind, clear but not too chilly.

Sorry about the card payment machine being on the blink. If you couldn't pay this time, please pay next time someone more competent than I is in control of things: that'd be super.

Well done to Nathan and Alice for clearing the course, I expected there would be some clearing occurring, given the scale of the map. All I could do was hope that the hill and the estates would be on my side to make things a wee bit trickier. Well done to our first timers, I hope you had a good time and will return for more fun and games.

Route wise, it was my first time planning an event, so I approached it suitably wet behind the ears. I wanted there to be fun stuff in the estates, as well as more running (and hills) further out. Unfortunately I had to scrap using a trig point as a control. I'd be interested to hear if anyone found a particularly prime route. During planning I ran some route optimisation algorithms through the course: one of the worst ones spat out 28 km. Needless to say I did better than that on a recce (and I expect you did too).

Thanks Richard for your words of encouragement and suggestions for improving things when mapping and planning, and for sorting out the map & its delivery. Thanks for persuading me to have a go at being on the other side of an event.

Thanks to Alice for control collecting at Cragg Hill and giving me a lift home when I realised I needed to somehow get the kit back to mine! Thanks to my housemate Jamie for your chauffeuring services to get the kit up to Bramley.

Thanks finally to Spoons for letting us use the pub, by the looks of things some patrons were intrigued by what we were up to.

Any questions about the results, comments or suggestions for improvement should I ever be asked back to do another event, give me a shout: jonathan dot coney at live dot co dot uk

The winter night score league returns on 8th February for its third outing, this time in Seacroft.

Cheers,

Jonny
